Farmingville, NY – On June 18, Supervisor Ed Romaine, Councilwoman Jane Bonner and Councilman Michael Loguercio were on hand at the ribbon cutting ceremony for The Coram Center for adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities. The center, built by Old Field-based developer and philanthropist Cary Staller, offers high school graduates activities in music, art, wellness, nutrition, technology and gardening to help reach their full potential. It also offers employment training and placement support among other programs. During the event, Mr. Staller was presented with a Certificate of Congratulations from the Brookhaven Town Board. Pictured at left are Councilwoman Bonner, Councilman Loguercio, Mr. Staller and Supervisor Romaine.
